Description

Currently, the only way to determine whether one is using Replicant 0003 instead of 0002 is by looking at the Build date. This isn't intuitive and makes it hard for users to determine if they have the most recent stable release. We should fix this for our 0004 release.

Something to change here I think: https://git.replicant.us/replicant/vendor\_replicant/tree/config/common.mk#n243. Will submit a patch tomorrow.

#4 - 10/09/2019 10:21 PM - Joonas Kylmälä

In addition to bumping the version string I have added now the following to the change log:

```
Replicant 6.0 0004 images
```

Common:

- * Security updates until August 2018
- * Per app renderer selection
- * Fix privacy issue with phone number lookup function in Dialer app

When the change log will be fully known by the end of the week I will submit the patch.

GNUtoo made a wiki page to help people identify what pre-6.0 0004 version they are running:

The patch has been acked-by:

<https://lists.osuosl.org/pipermail/replicant/2019-October/002221.html>

All we need to do is to apply it and add it to the Replicant 6.0 0004 tag

We have been updating a fair number of last minute things for 0004 so we should likely review and update the change log on this patch before pushing it. The change log currently includes the following:

Common:

Security updates until August 2018

Per app renderer selection

Fix privacy issue with phone number lookup functionality in the Dialer app

Wi-Fi integrated to system settings, replaces RepWifi

F-Droid removed because it was not compliant with FSDG

Experimental support for USB ethernet adapters

A v2 patch for this was sent to the mailing list: <https://lists.osuosl.org/pipermail/replicant/2020-January/002436.html>

It might be helpful to take a peek at this list of issues that have been closed since the 6.0 0003 release to make sure we didn't miss anything big in our change log:

- Resolution set to fixed

We can close that bug as it is now documented as part of the release procedure in the vendor/replicant-release-scripts repository.
